The majority of the scholars of Fiqh have asserted the forbiddance of shaving the beard. Some of them have stated that it is makrooh (disliked), however this ruling would be applied many times by them to forbidden things. This is because the people (scholars) of the past would designate the term makrooh (disliked) for Haraam (unlawful), as has been transmitted from them in the books of Usool-ul-Fiqh (The Principles of Jurisprudence). [You must also see what the great scholar Ibn Al-Qayyim wrote in his book I'alaam-ul-Muwaqqi'een (1/39-43) and Badaa'i-ul-Fawaa'id (4/6).]

1. The great scholar, Ibn Hazm Al-Andalusee said: "They – i.e. the Imaams – have unanimously agreed that shaving the beard is disfiguring (of Allaah's creation) and it is not permissible." [Maraatib al-Ijmaa' (157); also see Al-Muhallaa (2/189)]

2. Shaikh-ul-Islaam Ibn Taimiyyah said: "Shaving the beard is unlawful (Haraam)."
[Al-Ikhtiyaaraat al-'Ilmiyyah (pg. 6)]

3. Ibn 'Aabideen, from the notables amongst the Hanafee scholars – said: "It is forbidden for the man to cut his beard – i.e. to shave it." [Radd al-Muhtaar (3/418)]

4. Al-'Adawee, one of the elite among the Maalikee scholars, said: "It has been quoted from Maalik that he considered it makrooh (disliked) to shave what was below the palate, such that he said: 'It is from the actions of the Majoos (fire-worshippers)...likewise it is forbidden to stop the growth of the beard.'" [Al-'Adawee's notes to Sharh Risaalah Ibn Abee Zayd (2/411); Also see Hukm-ul-Liyah fil-Islaam of Shaikh Muhammad Al-Haamid (pg. 17)]

5. Ibn 'Abdil-Barr said in At-Tamheed: "It is forbidden to shave the beard. And no one does it except for those effeminate ones amongst the men." [Adillatu Tahreem Halq-il-Lihyah (96)]

6. Shaikh Ahmad bin Qaasim Al-'Ibaadee, one of the prestigious Shaafi'ee scholars, said: "Ibn Ar-Rif'ah said in Haashiyat-ul-Kaafiyah: 'Imaam Ash-Shaafi'ee stated in (his book) Al-Umm that it is forbidden to shave the beard. Likewise, Az-Zarkashee, Al-Hulaymee in Shu'ab-ul-Eemaan, and his teacher, Al-Qaffaal Ash-Shaashee in Mahaasin Ash-Sharee'ah, stated that it was forbidden to shave the beard." [Adillatu Tahreem Halq-il-Lihyah (96)]

7. As-Safaareenee, one of the notables amongst the Hanbalee scholars, said: "The view that is approved of and sanctioned in the (Hanbalee) madh-hab is: The forbiddance of shaving the beard." [Ghadhaa-ul-Albaab (1/376)]

8. Many of the contemporary scholars have ruled that shaving the beard is forbidden, such as:

'Abdul-Jaleel 'Eesaa, 'Alee Mahfoodh, 'Abdul-'Azeez bin Baaz, Naasir-ud-Deen Al-Albaanee, Muhammad Sultaan Al-Ma'soomee, Ahmad 'Abdur-Rahmaan Al-Bannaa As-Sa'aatee (watch-repairer), Abu Bakr Al-Jazaa'iree, Al-Kandahlaawee, 'Abdur-Rahmaan bin Qaasim, Isma'eel Al-Ansaaree and many others.
